What does the licence allow?

The reproduction rights licence for universities allows users to use excerpts (in paper or digital format) from millions of published works, such as:

- Books
- Newspapers
- Periodicals
- Plays (dramatic works)
- Song lyrics
- Musical scores from sheet music collections
- Images, illustrations, photographs, figures, charts or tables appearing in those various types of publications
- Excerpts from the listed types of publications or texts made available online legally by their copyright owners

The licence does not cover unpublished works, sheet music, material taken from the Internet, works in the public domain, content that can be reproduced for non-commercial purposes under Creative Commons licences, and works appearing on the Copibec Exclusions List. Under the licence, up to 15% of the total number of pages in a publication can be reproduced for the same group of students during the same semester.

With authority for most Canadian and foreign publications (Copibec represents about 30 countries under reciprocal agreements), we offer one-stop service so a wide spectrum of content users in Quebec can quickly and easily get permission for one-time use or take advantage of comprehensive licences that cover their ongoing needs.

Almost all Quebec universities have been issued a reproduction rights licence that enables their personnel to legally reproduce excerpts from published content and distribute them on paper or in digital format for educational or research purposes.

Thanks to the four-year licensing agreement that runs from June 1, 2017 to May 31, 2021, university personnel and copyright owners can rely on a fair and balanced framework for using copyright-protected material.

We offer one-stop service

1 To check whether your institution is covered by a Copibec licence, please visit our website at www.copibec.ca.

2 However, the digital versions of works listed in the Copibec repertoire are covered by the licence.

3 At the end of the 50th year following the author’s death (or the death of the last remaining contributor for a collaborative or translated work), the copyright for that work expires and the work may be copied without permission.

4 The Exclusions List can be viewed on Copibec’s website at www.copibec.ca.
It is also possible to reproduce an entire article from a periodical or newspaper and an entire chapter from a book as long as the reproduced excerpt does not exceed 20% of the total number of pages in the publication. In other words, within the scope of the agreement’s limits and conditions, university personnel are allowed to do the following:

- Scan a paper format work to make a digital copy
- Print a digital copy
- Email or fax a digital copy
- Store works on a secure network to make them available to the students enrolled in a course
- Give enrolled students a digital copy of a coursepack as long as the process is managed by the university or an authorized subcontractor
- Store a digital copy of a work authorized under the agreement on a local device or media (e.g. CD-ROM or USB flash drive)
- Project a paper or digital format reproduction (made in compliance with the agreement) in class using a computer or equivalent device such as an overhead or slide projector
- Display a digital format reproduction on a computer or other device
- Display a link or hyperlink leading to a digital format reproduction

Students are allowed only to do the following under the licence:

- Store a digital format reproduction provided by teaching staff on a local device or media
- Print a copy of a work provided in digital format by teaching staff

Please note that material in the Copibec repertoire CANNOT be made available on unsecured computer networks (e.g. Internet or any other public network), transmitted to non-employees or non-students, or stored in order to create a digital library.

Universities have agreed to pay annual licence fees (royalties) calculated according to their number of full time students.

The licence allows universities to use excerpts (in paper or digital format) from millions of published works.

5 For example: Moodle, LÉA, Symbiose, StudiUM, etc.

6 The annual licence fees are $13.50 per full time student.
WHAT ARE THE TERMS AND CONDITIONS?

If content users want to exceed the agreement’s reproduction limits, they have to request a pay-per-use licence from Copibec. A fee of $0.12 per page applies to any pages above the limit, up to a maximum of 20% of the total number of pages in the work. Requests to reproduce more than 20% of a work are analyzed by Copibec based on the availability of the work or according to the conditions and fees determined by the copyright owner.

Each institution has to designate someone to apply the agreement and make sure the licence terms and conditions are respected. The institution also has to notify Copibec which third parties are authorized to administer the institution’s secure networks or take authorized actions on its behalf under the licence.

OBLIGATIONS

To ensure that the royalties collected for reproduced content can be redistributed fairly to creators and publishers, universities are required to report the following data to Copibec twice a year:

- Excerpts reproduced in paper format and grouped together in coursepacks
- Excerpts reproduced in digital format, i.e. copies sent by email, made available through a link or hyperlink, or stored on secure networks

The data on all content reproduced in paper or digital format must be compiled in an electronic file or designated system and must include complete bibliographic references that accurately identify the material used. However, the following do not have to be reported to Copibec:

- Paper format copies not included in coursepacks
- Content reproduced under pay-per-use licences from Copibec
- Material not covered by the agreement, such as works in the public domain, content on the Exclusions List or material whose reproduction has been authorized directly by the copyright owner or representative or under commercial agreements that apply to the institution

7 For example: Coopsco network or other subcontractor

8 Dexero’s DDA, Altilogix’s Repro+ or Copibec’s Savia online system. Savia is available to content users free of charge
COMPENSATION FOR CREATORS

By respecting the university licensing agreement, you’re supporting fair compensation for creators. And when you keep track of the content used, you’re showing in a tangible way that you recognize the value of creative work, research and intellectual property.

Copyright empowers our cultural vitality. Content creators deserve fair compensation for their work that enriches our education system.
